

Strathmore University PRESS

STRATHMORE LAW JOURNAL [ISSN 2411-5975]

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES 2015

Strathmore Law Journal is the annual, peer reviewed periodical of Strathmore Law School. Strathmore Law Journal publishes scholarly contributions on topical aspects of African law and the law in Africa. We aim at encouraging excellence on research and scholarship on legal issues affecting the African continent.

Strathmore Law Journal is published annually in the month of June by Strathmore University Press. Deadline for submission is 31 December 2015. Submissions discussing relevant subject matter situations in other regions of Africa beyond East Africa, especially across Africa's linguistic divide are particularly encouraged.

Submissions must conform to our style guide, SLASLEC, and these Submission Guidelines. Please visit our Journal page at www.press.strathmore.edu to download a copy of SLASLEC. The online edition is available on open access on our website.

Types of submissions

Strathmore Law Journal accepts four types of submissions:

- Full articles, which must be between 7000 and 10,000 words, inclusive of footnotes.
- Recent law and policy developments, which must be between 2000 and 3000 words.
- Recent jurisprudential developments, which must be between 2000 and 3000 words.
- Book reviews, which must be between 2000 and 3000 words.

Full Articles

Each Volume publishes a selection of articles covering aspects of African law and the law in Africa. From time to time, the editors may announce a special issue that would focus on a chosen topic. Full article submissions under a special issue call for papers would be expected to conform to the specific themes as communicated in such a call.

Recent Legal or Jurisprudential Developments

This section would cover recent developments in African law and the law in Africa, both at municipal and international levels. This can either cover landmark decisions or legal or policy enactments.

Book Reviews

Each Volume accommodates reviews of scholarly works on African law and the law in Africa, published not more than two years preceding the 31 December deadline. Reviews of works by African scholars, and those that illuminate areas of law that impinge on regional and continental questions, are particularly encouraged.

Submission Guidelines

Submissions must be in an ordinarily available word processing file and sent to editor.sup@strathmore.edu by 31 December of each year, unless the submission is for a special issue, in which case the applicable date shall be that indicated in the relevant Call for papers.

Upon submission, authors must indicate clearly:

- That the proposed article has not been published elsewhere and that it is not under consideration for publication in another journal.
- That the author has received permission for use of any copyright material and has duly acknowledged this in the submission.
- That the listed authors of the submission have both contributed substantially to the submission and have duly approved the final submitted draft as well as accepted to be listed as authors.

Steps to ensure blind peer review

Submissions made for consideration for publication under the “Full article” category will be considered for blind peer review. This means that neither the peer reviewer nor the author may know the identity of the other. On submission, authors must ensure of the following:

- The submission must have a cover page that includes the full title, a brief bio and contact details of the author.
- The rest of the article must not contain any reference to the author.

- Authors must especially ensure that any identifying information is removed from the file properties.
- While authors are allowed to sparingly and reasonably cite from their previous works, under no circumstances can the wording of the text or any explanatory or bibliographic footnote indicate that the cited authority is indeed the author's. Put differently authors may only cite their previous works in the same unqualified manner they do other scholars.
- The editors reserve the right to return submissions that do not adhere to these steps for rectification before any peer review can be considered.

The editors will ensure that any peer review comments communicated to authors are similarly stripped of identifying information.

Copyrights and open access

Strathmore Law Journal is an open access journal. Its online issues are available at www.press.strathmore.edu Print editions may be sold at a nominal fee.

As such, authors submitting articles for publication with the Strathmore Law Journal agree to the following terms:

- Authors retain copyrights
- Authors grant the Strathmore Law Journal the right of first publication
- Prior to publication, while authors are permitted and in fact encouraged to post their work online on other their institutional repositories, we require that such pre-publication versions are duly dated, in order to distinguish with the possible published version on Strathmore Law Journal
- may enter into separate, additional contractual arrangements for the non-exclusive distribution of the journal's published version of the work (e.g., post it to an institutional repository or publish it in a book), with an acknowledgement of its initial publication in this journal.